

OVERVIEW

Transitioning a farm from one generation to the next – whether the new generation is related or not – is among the biggest challenges facing the agriculture industry today. Transitioning farmers need comprehensive advice in several areas, including estate planning, real estate, leasing, agricultural law and agricultural programs, business entity formation, and taxes.

While assembling these myriad resources may seem like a daunting task, Hellmuth & Johnson’s farm succession attorneys provide assistance in all of these areas. Backed by the power of a full-service law firm, our highly skilled attorneys will collaborate with each other and partner with your trusted business advisors to tailor a succession plan that best suits your needs.
