JOHNSON

INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY
& E-COMMERCE

OVERVIEW

In a relatively new sector, our IT lawyers possess decades of experience. In fact, our technology and e-commerce lawyers have nearly sixty years of combined experience as in-house counsel and private practice attorneys, serving clients ranging from start-ups to large, international firms.

Our legal and business experience in the tech sector, combined with the collaborative structure of our practice, gives us a unique multidisciplinary perspective that can help reduce risk, identify opportunities, and save you money. The diversity of our clients reflects the broad range of our capabilities. Hellmuth & Johnson's technology and e-commerce lawyers frequently serve as lead counsel to negotiate mission critical IT and e-commerce engagements. We have also drafted and closed hundreds of IT and e-commerce agreements, including complex seven and eight-figure agreements for industry leaders in healthcare, e-commerce, insurance, financial services, high tech and manufacturing.

While we regularly represent large international companies, our Minneapolis-based technology lawyers draw on a wealth of legal resources, including their own experience as entrepreneurs, to assist start-up entities. But clients of all sizes value our experience. As a partner who understands both law and business, we are uniquely positioned to help manage risk and fuel your growth – no matter how fast your enterprise grows or the direction in which your industry evolves.
